STATE FAIR OF TEXAS, 1913

FOREWORD

THE State Fair of Texas wishes to call to your attention the fact that such a collection as this one can only be seen during one of the large annual exhibitions in the big art centers.

These paintings are of the highest standard and are selected works brought together by our representative in the East, who has been engaged in this work all summer.

Many of the paintings have been shown abroad and all of them are from prominent exhibitions in the art centers of this country.

The expense attached in showing this collection is great, but it is cheerfully borne by the State Fair of Texas, because it is realized that Art is an important part of the life of a community.

The power of a work of Art to add to our lives something which can come in no other way is being recognized throughout this country and is finding expression in the forming of permanent collections in nearly every large town and city of this land. In Dallas the permanent collection has grown to be second to no other in a town of equal size. It is one of the purposes of this exhibition to acquire works for the permanent collection. Just as a work of Art is a source of inspiration to a community, it is even more so when placed in the home.

There are paintings here which are within the means of many people to buy, and being sold directly from the artist, without any commission, the opportunity presented should be grasped by every one who wishes to add a source of pleasure, broader culture and inspiration to his home.
